

Sandy City's Newest Park: Quail Hollow

Sandy City is in the process of designing a new 53-acre park on Sandy's north east side located at 9100 South 2900 East called Quail Hollow. The parcel of land was purchased years ago as part of Sandy City's Parks and Recreation Master Plan which identified large parcels in Sandy that could be used as park space and be developed as funding became available. Our current 2005 Parks, Recreation & Trails Master Plan shows a need for additional soccer fields in the city. Thus new fields will be included in the design phase as well as other amenities needed in this area. Only a portion of the 53-acres will be developed into traditional park space leaving the remainder of the park with a natural/passive landscape containing trails for walking and hiking. The steering committee consisting of residents, city staff and PSOMAS as the design team, were asked to provide input on the most beneficial uses of space and are also considering additional picnic sites, lights on the soccer fields and an off-leash dog area. The steering committee will meet several times prior to the design of the park. We anticipate the project will go to the City Planning Commission in June of this year. Construction of the project is currently planned to take place in phases when funds are available. Just a reminder to our park patrons, dogs are to remain on a leash in any city park whether developed or undeveloped.
